Members and friends of the University of Nigeria Alumni Association, United Kingdom (UNAA-UK) have just held their 2019 annual convention in Nottingham and rose with the following communique:

1. The Association appreciates the exceptional hospitality and friendliness of the people of Nottingham.
2. The Association reiterates its determination to support the Alma Mater in various ways to achieve an improved performance and greater global visibility.
3. Suitably qualified and endowed members of the Association are called upon to sign up to the “reverse brain drain” initiative which seeks to “plough back” human and material resources to the Alma Mater and Nigeria. This initiative was formalised at the convention by means of two MOUs between UNAA-UK and the University of Nigeria’s College of Medicine.
4. The Association notes with delight the attendance and quality of participation by the Administration of the Alma Mater at the convention as a morale booster for the members.
5. UNAA-UK views with delight the recent collaboration meetings between the Alma Mater and two British universities, University of Northampton and University of Nottingham.
6. The Association, therefore, looks forward to very productive research collaborations in various disciplines and also possible lecturer/student exchange programmes between both universities and our Alma Mater.
7. The Association, being a body of members of the British community, would like to call on key players to sincerely work together to end the current Brexit impasse which has caused huge economic and political uncertainties.
